

How can you access the collective knowledge of your peers to help you make informed decisions?

There's little doubt that successfully delivering business solutions can be a challenging process and professionals will often encounter similar issues irrespective of their industry or sector.

With the rapid change of technology and an ever-evolving business environment, connecting with professional peers is a valuable means of accessing contemporary knowledge on solving some of those issues.

With our understanding of the corporate landscape, Quay Consulting has established a number of specialised peer-to-peer networks under the banner of Quay Collaborate to enable exactly that.

About Quay Collaborate

Quay Collaborate is a member-based community of like-minded peers who share, learn and develop through real-world, facilitated knowledge transfer. Peer groups are able to:

- Discuss contemporary challenges
- Share best practice ideas and practical experience
- Network with like-minded experts
- Collaborate with their peers on solutions

- Keep up to date with developments within both the industry and the discipline.
- Access cutting edge content based on practical peer knowledge and SME insights.

Using a proven roundtable format operating under Chatham House Rules, each roundtable is led by a professional facilitator. This enables our network groups to engage in an open, honest, collaborative environment on the issues, challenges and opportunities they encounter when executing the responsibilities within their roles.

About Our Networks

Our groups are exclusive and limited. Each member agrees to abide by the code of conduct and confidentiality conditions imposed on the group. Real world issues require real world experience.

An on-topic subject matter expert may provide some initial thought leadership to the group, however the floor is then open to participants to share their own experience.

Most sessions will run with:

- A specific topic for the day;
- A guest SME on that topic;
- A roundtable discussion on topic or off topic as driven by the network and led by the facilitator.

How Quay Collaborate makes a difference

Our facilitators encourage and support members to share their successes and failures in an approach that is:

- Collaborative and positive
- Professionally-led
- Based on real experience, insight and relevant knowledge
- Confidential

Outputs from each session are made available to group members excluding any confidential or sensitive information.
